Gen. Farnsworth's staff was made up of W. W. Eldridge, assistant adjutant general; Col. Thomas S. Hopkins, aid-de-camp; Capt. A. S. Perham, aid-de-camp, and Capt. W. H. Nerton, aid-de-camp. Immediately following the staff officers came the various posts of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., in numerical order, all carrying American flags and post insignias. The Henderson Drum Corps-furnished the music for the leading brigade.

The Old Guard of the Grand Army turned out about forty members and attracted much attention in the old green uniforms applause greeting the veterans all along the line of march. The armed Sons of Veterans of Lincoln Camp followed, and there were detachments also in this brigade from the District of Columbia volunteers of 1861-'65, the Union Veterans' Union, the Union Veteran Legion and camps of unarmed Sons of Veterans.

The Department of the Fotomac of the Grand Army was in direct command of the senior vice commander, Gen. Slaybaugh, Commander Farnsworth being in command of the brigade.

The second brigade of the third division came next along the avenue, Major E. L. Hawks of the 10th Immunes, commanding. First in the line came detachments from the Sheridan Sabers, from Pittsburg, and the National Rifles of this city. A number of Spanish-American veterans in the person of officers and men of the 8th Immunes, who enlisted from the District of Columbia, followed the Rifles, carrying properly lettered banners announcing their identity.

In this brigade there were also two colored companies, the organization being in general command of Captain Young, who tion to proceed with the extension of Penn- acted as major. The Butler Zouaves, forty strong, were commanded by Captain W. T. Thompson and Lieutenants Herring and Wilson Peads. The Capital City Guards, thirty-seven strong, were commanded by Captain Abraham Acwith and Lieutenants John F. Talleferro and Salughter. The staff consisted of Captain Pendleton and Lieutenant Wiley Yates.

The College Organizations. What was probably the triumph of the parade, however, came with the appearance of the college organizations in the third brigade of the third division, which was in command of Colonel John H. Gunnell of the High School Cadet Regiment. Following the drum corps leading the brigade came the cadets of St. John's College of Annapolis, Md. CROWDS ON THE STREETS. Residents and Visitors Out in Full Force Today.

Pennsylvania avenue, F street and 7th street sidewalks took on a jubilee air today with the presence on the streets of crowds increased in numbers over the usual throngs of those thoroughfares. It was evident early in the day that not only was Washington turning out her citizens to do honor to the occasion, but that residents of other communities were coming to take part in the ceremonies of the peace celebration.

The early morning trains arriving at the 6th street station and the B. and O. station brought considerable numbers of strangers to the city. It was said at the depot that the regular trains each carried from one to three extra cars. The people coming upon these trains would not be classed as ordinary excursionists, but probably came to spend more than one day in the capital. They were distributed among the various hotels, and while no one hotel was overcrowded with guests, all claimed to be receiving a share of the increased travel. The excursion trains began to arrive about noon. The Chesapeake and Ohio brought in a large excursion from Rich-mond. Other roads brought in trains durmond. Other roads brought in trains dur-ing the day, and, it is said, that Wednesday and Thursday will also witness the arriva of excursions from nearby cities. The Nor folk boat brought up a good complement from Norfolk, Hampton, Newport News and Old Point.

During the morning there was heavy travel over the Pennsylvania and Northern Central lines from points between Baltimore and Harrisburg and the vicinity of the latter city. Pennsylvania seems to be taking quite an interest in the jubilee and Philadelphia is expected to send over a contingent of sightsees. contingent of sightseers.

Downtown Business Streets.

neighborhood of the court of honor, the White House and the executive depart-ments, while in the early hours of the forenoon there were many visitors to the Capi-tol and the Leautiful building of the Library of Congress.

Many exclamations of delight were heard at the elaborate decoration along the business thoroughfares, and the crowds were profuse in praise of the beauties of the court of honor.

The citizens seemed to have taken a holiday, judging from the throngs upon the streets and townsmen and visitors mindled.

streets, and townsmen and visitors mingled in jostling crowds eager to see everything in sight and avail themselves of all the in sight and avail themselves of all the amusements spread out for their benefit by the jubilee committees. Of course the street fakirs were out in force with their wares, their cries adding to the confusion, and bustle of the moment in every square. All kinds of badges, toys and catchpenny devices were for sale. The fruit vendors, the candy men and the hoky poky dealers were on hand, and the saffron tinted son of sunny Italy with the crisp peanut and the malarial looking banan was ublquitous.

The restaurants and cafes were prepared for a good business, and even the humble street purveyors of refreshment for the inner man displayed extra stocks of goods in their own peculiar lines. On the south side of Market space this class of restau-

Usually they are conducted by colored men or women, and are sources of great comfort to the colored excursionist. One colored man on Market space had a big push cart, equipped with an oil stove, and he was do ing a rushing business in fried fish, soft shell crabs fried in batter and oyster fritters. The odor of the fried fish could be discerned half a square away, and was in itself a big advertisement. Nearby was a

As the day wore on the crowds increased and when the departments turned out the streets became uncomfortably full. After the noon hour, when people had lunched and were beginning to think of the ceremonies of the afternoon, business became good for the grand stand proprietors. There was considerable demand for seats to view the parade, evidencing the interest of the citizens and the visitors in this feature of the program of the first day's festivities Those who did not take seats on the stands provided lined up along the avenue at points of vantage, many taking position hours before the parade started, and waiting patiently for the coming of the soldiers The crowds were orderly and sober, giv-ing the police no trouble. The visitors from out of town were of the substantial sort and seemed bent upon enjoying themselves but without disturbing any one else.

MAKE GOOD SHOWING. Police Under Maj. Sylvester in the Peace Parade. The members of the police department who participated in today's festivities made an excellent showing. The men were all it full dress, and for the first time this season they wore their summer helmets. In addition to the regular mounted squad, twentysix privates were added to this service, giving enough men to keep the avenue clear without the aid of ropes. Footmen, as well uniforms, including white gloves, and carried shining batons.

The mounted men who aided as escort to the military parade reported to Sergt. Mat-thews at 1st street and Pennsylvania avenue at 1 o'clock. Other mounted men re ported to different sergeants at points along the line of Pennsylvania avenue. Police lieutenants had charge of arrange ments in different sections of the city along the line of march, and looked out for the men in their respective commands. This morning the attention of the office was again called to the instructions of Maj. Sylvester, issued a few days ago, relating o the maintenance of peace and order.
